

Diminished vision and hearing, cognitive decline, and limitations in mobility are just a few of the many challenges brought on by aging. Despite these conditions, according to the AARP, 76% of adults 50 and older want to remain in their current homes.

For this reason, we developed a resource to help seniors and their families determine if aging at home is a viable option. We detail programs, services, and other forms of support available in Pennsylvania to help aging residents continue to live at home. You can view it, as well as a guide to in-home care, here:
